Building and Scaling Marketing Teams

The "Building and Scaling Marketing Teams" training is a closed, dedicated training and workshop program designed for companies that are developing or restructuring their marketing teams. The goal of the training is to design an effective marketing team structure, clearly defined roles and responsibilities, and processes that support scaling without chaos or burnout.

The program focuses on real organizational challenges: from selecting the right marketing team structure at different stages of a company's growth, through recruitment and onboarding in a remote model, to competency mapping, setting KPIs, and building a culture of ownership and accountability. Special emphasis is placed on asynchronous communication, collaboration within hybrid and remote teams, and practical ways to prevent overload and burnout in marketing teams.

Training recipients

The training is intended for marketing leaders, Heads of Marketing, CMOs, founders, and HR teams working closely with marketing departments.
The program is designed for organizations that are building or scaling marketing teams in remote or hybrid environments and want to structure their team organization, competencies, and ways of working in a way that supports the company's long-term growth.
